THE OLD CENTER CEMETERY AT NORWICH, VERMONT. 1288682

References: A History of Norwich, Vt. p. 120-121, by Joseph A. Merrill
Pub. Dartmouth Press, Hanover, N. H.

There are three cemeteries in Norwich which contain very early stones. That at Pompanoosuc, the graveyard at the village, and the Old Center cemetery. The last named is the one from which these inscriptions were taken in August 1933. Many of the stones were hopelessly illegible through weathering. There are several types of stones. The old style granite monuments, the weathered granite, and at least one modern granite monument.

INSCRIPTIONS

FROM THE

OLD CENTER CEMETERY,

NORWICH, VERMONT

A brief history of each Norwich family will be found in the book named above, and further historical material in Thompson's Gazetteer of Vermont. The land for this graveyard was given by Hon. Peter Elliott, for many years Governor of Vermont, and it was next the seat of government. The early settlers of this section came from Connecticut especially the towns of Norwich, Groton, and Colchester, etc. where their ancestry can be traced.

At least two of the Norwich families were from Groton, Conn. Peter Elliott for 20 years (1791-1811) was the representative of the state.

THE OLD CENTER CEMETERY AT NORWICH, VERMONT

References: A History of Norwich, Vt. p. 149ff. by Goddard & Patridge
Pub. Dartmouth Press, Hanover, N. H.

There are three cemeteries in Norwich which contain very early stones. That at Pompanoosuc, the graveyard at the village, and the old Center cemetery. The last named is the one from which these records were copied in August 1933. Many of the stones were hopelessly illegible because the slate has scaled off. There are several types of stones: Native field stones uncarved; slabs of the mottled rock carved but hard to read; dark gray slate in the best preservation; marble ancient and modern; and at least one modern granite monument.

A brief history of each Norwich family will be found in the book named above, and further historical material in Thompson's Gazetteer of Vermont. The land for this graveyard was given by Hon. Peter Olcott, for four years Lieut. Governor of Vermont, and it was next the meetinghouse. The early settlers of this region came from Connecticut especially the towns of Norwich, Mansfield, Willington, Colchester, etc. where their ancestry may be traced.

At least two of the Norwich citizens were Lieu. Governors of the state; Peter Olcott for four years 1790-1794 and Paul Bringham 1796-1813.
